Secure London is a two-day conference focused on the issues surrounding the security of major sporting events and the security of cities. It will bring international experts together to present case studies on how they and their organisations have trained for, dealt with and learnt from the kinds of challenges that will face the organisers of such events.

Amongst other agencies, it will be supported by the London Chamber of Commerce, London First, Cava Media, The Metropolitan Police and the Mayor of London's Office.

Delegations will be encouraged to attend not only from the planners of the 2012 Games, but from other major events occurring within the next four years for example, the Vancouver Winter Olympics 2010, the Delhi Commonwealth Games 2010 and the South African World Cup.

Attendees will come from the security equipment and solution providing communities, along with representatives of many cities that plan for and host major events.

WHAT MAKES SECURE LONDON 2009 UNIQUE?

- It is a purely case study-driven programme, with no theoretical or commercial presentations. Hear only from people that have real lessons to impart.
- It hinges on a major sporting event in a major city, therefore focusing on real needs and a real budget.
- The programme has been created by real-world experts with years of experience.

THE FUTURE OF SECURE

"Secure" will be a long-term brand taken to other cities in the future, therefore building a community of security experts focused on the protection of major events.

WHO WILL ATTEND?

- Private- and public- sector delegates and organisations that are tasked with delivering large-scale construction, IT, security, communications and people provision projects that combine to build major sporting and ceremonial events

Delegates will be from the strategic end of these projects, and from national and international organisations such as:

- local authorities
- planning and design
- the emergency services
- construction
- the security industry
- government and non-government agencies
- the security services
- the military
- the transport industry
- the CBRNE community
- the widest spectrum of the IT community
